DAIRYMAIDS' CONVENTION.

The Dairymaids were accorded a hearty reception last evening at Schieffelin hall on the occasion of their first convention in Tombstone. About twenty delegates were in attendance, and the session was entirely harmonious. With one exception, the young ladies gave evidence of a thorough knowledge of parliamentary usage and conducted the convention with decorum.

Miss Minnie Hart presided over their deliberations with dignity, and Miss Sarah Herring performed the arduous duties of Secretary in an entirely acceptable manner. The record of proceedings of the last convention, as read by the secretary, caused much amusement.

The debate on the oleomargarine resolutions grew warm and many good points were made pro and con.

Miss Easton read a communication from an absent sister, which was well received.

The Dairymaids then gave a chorus, "The Cows are in the Corn," after which Miss Lucy Herrick delivered an essay on the cow, which was well prepared and most excellently delivered.

"Cousin Jedediah," by Miss Jones, in which the Maidens joined in the chorus, was followed by a solo by Miss Maggie Hill, "Where are you going my pretty Maid?" both of which pieces were excellently rendered, and elicited much applause.

During the evening a quartette consisting of Mesdames Gage and Sherman, and Messrs. Howe and Williams, favored the Dairymaids and their audience with two beautiful selections, "Italia" and "Come where my love lies dreaming." Their voices blended harmoniously, and the performance brought forth a highly deserved encore.

"Milk Time," a poem written by Mr. Philip Morse, formerly of this city, was rendered by Miss Josephine: Boots in a faultless manner. She gave evidence of being a finished elocutionist.

Little Allie Crabbe, six years old, sang "The Little Maid milking her Cow," very prettily, and was greeted with thunders of applause.

The Maidens then gave "Grandmother's Advice," which was followed by "Robin kissed me," by Miss Sallie Goodrich. This was quite a difficult selection, but was very well rendered. Miss Sallie afterwards sang a medley which brought down the house.

Mr. Tom Davis, of San Francisco, who was introduced as a friend of the Dairymaids, gave a beautiful selection, "Marguerite." He has a well cultivated baritone voice, and created a very favorable impression. In response to an encore he gave another equally beautiful selection.

The programme was closed with the "See-Saw" chorus, which was well rendered by the Maidens. In fact, all the choruses evinced much study and practice.

Not the least pleasing feature of the entertainment was the Grand March, in which the Maidens went through a series of difficult evolutions. Dressed in their turkey-red costumes, with broad straw hats, and each armed with a milking pail and three-legged stool, they presented a very beautiful picture.

Taken altogether, it was perhaps the most praiseworthy amateur performance ever given in Tombstone, and as a consequence many requests have been made for its repetition.

The lion's share of credit for the success of the entertainment is due to Miss Mary Goodrich, who presided at the piano and previously drilled the Maidens in their music. Much credit is also due to Mr. Howard Herring, who arranged the programme and managed the stage.

At the present writing all those who had tickets for sale have not reported and consequently it is impossible to give the amount realized, but undoubtedly it must be a handsome sum. The proceeds go to the Methodist church.

After the performance, a lunch which was set in an adjoining room, was liberally patronized.

The Pueblo Smelting and Refining company is now building a very extensive plant at that point. The buildings will be located on the mesa above the silver and lead works, and the main building, which will be of brick, will be 600x120 or larger than any building in the city. The character of the work is unknown as it is a secret process that will be used.

The story of the Indian fight on the Republican, which occurred twenty years ago, will be read with interest. Our worthy Chief of Police, George Oaks, was one of the scouts engaged in the terrible fight, and testifies to the truthfulness of the account.

The grand jury concluded its labors yesterday after a session of five days. They examined into twelve cases, found seven true bills and ignored five charges.
